122. Comments

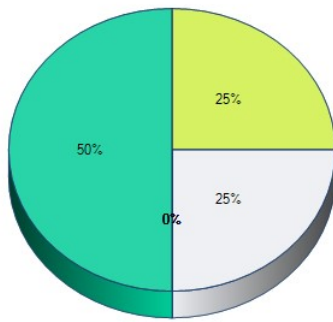

- Very frustrated with the lack of communication, helpfulness, etc by one teacher in particular. All of my graduate courses were awesome, except for Curriculum Design and Development SUMMER I, 2017. This professor does not understand the work level associated with full time teaching and what it actually means to help teachers advance professionally.
Overall, my professors were positive, engaging, helpful, and knowledgeable. My negative experiences have resulted in a seeming lack of organization and communication between the English Department and the Registrar at FSC. Although I applied for a graduate program in 2015, I was unknowingly put into a catalogue year of 2007-2008, which resulted in courses being applied to outdated requirements, additional work and paperwork for me, and confused faculty members. More recently, I discovered that my degree still had one outdated requirement, and without my having stumbled upon this information myself, this would not have been addressed or fixed. The English department got rid of a course, but it remained on Degree Works and the Registrar separately told me I needed to take it or petition to replace it. When I asked English faculty members, I was dismissed ("Don't worry about ENGL 9500—it doesn't exist anymore!")
- When I continued to question them, I was suddenly told a different answer, that I couldn't just ignore it, and actually did have to petition to replace the course. I am disappointed that the English Department wouldn't have communicated to the Registrar to keep things up to date. This not only meant that I had to deal with more confused faculty members, but also that I had to do additional paperwork as a result of FSU departments not doing their own jobs. The only person who has been consistently helpful has been the English Studies Administrative Assistant, Diane Lucas. Thank you to her.
