What is the Clery Act?

The Clery Act is named after Jeanne Ann Clery, a 19-year-old Lehigh University freshman who was raped and murdered in her dorm room on April 5th, 1986.

Shortly after Jeanne's murder, her parents discovered that in the three years prior to her murder, 38 violent crimes had occurred on Lehigh's campus, which went largely unannounced. Her parents believe Jeanne and her fellow students would have been more cautious if they had known about these violent crimes.

In response to Jeanne's murder, her parents championed a bill originally enacted by Congress and signed into law by President George H. W. Bush in 1990 as the Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act of 1990. The federal law requires colleges and universities across the United States to disclose information about crime on and around their campuses. The act has been amended over the years to include reporting requirements and provide provisions for sex offender notifications, campus emergency response and victim protection.

All public and private institutions of postsecondary education participating in federal financial aid programs are subject to the Clery Act, and are monitored by the U.S. Department of Education.

Failure to comply with the law will result in a $59,017 fine per violation. Institutions may also be suspended from participating in federal aid programs.
